Neelie Sacharow believes that true freedom can only be achieved when one is financially independent. Achieving your goals involves more than just number crunching and investment management. Over time, her clients become aware that true financial freedom can only be achieved through comprehensive financial planning that takes into consideration the “big picture.”

To that end, Neelie conducts a comprehensive financial analysis that focuses on getting to know the clients’ current overall financial situation; and, of equal importance, what the clients’ vision of their financial future looks like. It is Neelie’s desire to help her clients gain clarity regarding what financial freedom means to them and to understand what it will take to realistically achieve it.

Neelie was born in St. Petersburg, Florida, but has lived in many different places throughout America. In 2004 she returned to live in South Florida after having spent eight years in the mountains of North Carolina. She has four amazing sons and four equally amazing grandchildren and enjoys sharing her home with five dogs, two cats, and a wonderful collection of crystals.

After spending over ten years as a spiritual advisor, Neelie developed a burning desire to help people take control of their finances. In 2005, she joined a large financial planning company becoming a CRPC (Chartered Retirement Planning Counselor) in 2007. Her move to Legacy Wealth Management in September of 2010 was based on a desire to offer her clients more freedom of choice, better financial planning options, and investment advice that is truly independent and unbiased.

Neelie’s passions include combat mixed martial arts (MMA), kickboxing, dance, music, Renaissance Faires, Harry Potter, and the pursuit of her Spiritual path.
